Dedication

It has been said that there is nothing so rare as a day in June, for then, if ever, come perfect days. For those of us who graduated this spring there has been a growing realization that, though the June of 1993 has held more than its share of wonderful memories, there have also been days when nothing could prevent a note of regret from creeping in. Commencement, in particular, seemed like one of those days. For all of the talk about "beginning" the rest of our lives, there was the reality that this meant good-bye as well.

With that prospect in mind the Class of 1993 has taken this opportunity to say an especial farewell to Miss Judith Sessler, our teacher, taskmaster and friend for the last four years. To those of us fortunate enough to have been her students, Miss Sessler represents a unique combination of passion, dedication and ability. No one among us will soon forget her insistence that compositions be submitted error-free, even if that meant revising the same paper six or seven times. No one (try as some might) will forget the enthusiasm with which Miss Sessler guided us through "Grendel" or "The Crystal Cave". No one will ever forget her occasional tirades (we said she was passionate), or how quickly she would remind her astonished students, "But I'm not mad! I'm not mad!" We also won't forget the many softball games she attended (she actually coached the team many years ago), nor the fine sense of humor she displayed when we kidded her about her boots. Most of all though, we will remember Miss Sessler for the interest she took in our lives, for which reason we lovingly dedicate Aegis 93 in her name. These have been rare days indeed.

INTEREST AND INTENSITY

During commencement exercises last spring we listened as several of the speakers testified to the virtues of growing up in a small town. "Everyone knows and cares for everyone else" is a very simple summary of the remarks on that beautiful day. Yet a large measure of what was seen as good and wholesome about life in East Longmeadow is due to the efforts of the faculty members pictured here. Their job description reads "teacher," and for our four years at ELHS they have done their best to do just that - teach. But in a small school a teacher must wear many other hats as well: as coach, advisor, disciplinarian, confidant, role model, etc . . . Lately, several faculty members have even taken to wearing a cap from years long since passed, as students in masters or doctoral programs. Still others have taken on the role of mentor to the next generation of teachers, to insure our children's opportunity for a quality education. It has not always been an easy fit, but, our teachers have worn each of these hats with distinction.

FACULTY

Mr. Fim and Mr. Courtney caught in the act of taking bets from Jen DiMichele before the game. Mr. Fim, we all know you wanted to be a baseball player, but Pete Rose? . . . C'mon!

Q. What was your most embarrassing moment during high school?

A. Taking my date to the Senior Prom in a motorcycle side-car.

-anonymous

After the prom I took down part of the garage door with my parents' car.

-Mr. Maller

I threw up in Latin class and the teacher ignored it!

-Mrs. Burke

Probably when I blew up the chem. lab! (The entire school was evacuated.)

-anonymous

Q. Where did you hang out on weekends?

A. At the beach or downtown Fitchburg.

-anonymous

We drove to Connecticut a lot to go dancing.

-anonymous

Friends' homes, a local dance hall called the Casino and a drive-in theater or hamburger joint.

-Mr. Bolles

The beach, or "cruise around the Bay", or go into NYC.

-Mr. Maller

Four years later . . . and Mr. Mazzariello still has to direct us to our classes!

"She's got spirit - how 'bout you?" Mis Czajkowski urges the field hockey team to a win over Westfield.

Mr. Freccero opens the year with an address stressing individuality and unity.

The King and Queen of Swing? Mr. Turner and Mindy Robison find the way to Carnegie Hall . . . practice, practice, practice. "Whoop-de-ding-dong!" Miss Quirk's battle cry led our soccer team to the playoffs. Mr. Calabrese has it made in the shade during a Cross Country meet against Longmeadow.

Q. What do you think the class of '93 is?

A. Filled with potential but not quite realizing its best yet.

-Mr. Calabrese

Wild and funny.

-Mrs. Burke

Hard working and ambitious.

-anonymous

Spirited, fun, and interesting.

-anonymous

Q. What were the top fashions of your high school years?

A. Navy blue blazers, white 'buck' shoes.

-Mrs. Barnshaw

Mini's, midi's, bellbottoms, tent dresses, see-through shirts.

-anonymous

Due to my advanced age, it's hard to remember, but I do vaguely recall that togas were in vogue.

-Mr. Marden

Plaid skirts, colored opaque stockings, platform shoes, stretch jeans.

ENERGY AND ENTHUSIASM

Getting slammed into submission by a hulking senior; being duped into taking the elevator to the nonexistent 3rd. floor; carrying all of your books around all day for fear you'd never find your locker again - these are the old myths we were afraid would come true when we were freshmen in 1989. Even as innocent little ninth graders, though, we didn't need long to discover that these and other myths were basically untrue; that seniors considered us part of the scenery and not worth the trouble; that the elevator joke was stale about 10 minutes after orientation; that carrying your books everywhere didn't mean you were lost, it was a good way to build up your arms (not all the myths were untrue). Thus exposed, ELHS began to feel like Birchland, only with more homework. As we passed into 10th. and 11th. grades real responsibilities began to accumulate. We got our first jobs, went on our first dates, took our first driver's test (for some, once is never enough). We spent the majority of our lives at ELHS in those middle years, impatient to get to the top and a little afraid of what might happen when we got there. We also created a lot of great memories. In introducing this section we've chosen to write about our own experiences on the way up because there was one myth we were never able to disprove: the best things in life go by far too quickly. Enjoy these years while you can.

It has been almost a year since Geoff passed away, but on so many of those days — his birthday, the last day of summer, Christmas morning — we have thought, "But this day last year was his last day to see this."

For many of us these special anniversaries are a way of remembering Geoff, in good times and bad, but always as one of us, for he certainly helped make the circle of our lives more complete. He seems so vulnerable now, when you think that each one of those days was the last.

Soon the final day will come around again, as inexorably as it did last year. But expected this time. The cycle of our memories will begin anew, but our circle will have grown noticeably smaller.

ON THE MOVE

for

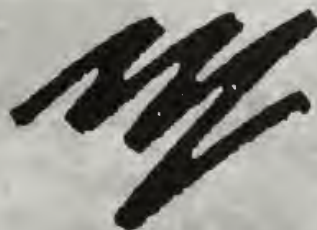

FUN AND FRIENDSHIP

We went looking through old year-books the other day, supposedly to see what designs had been used before, but really to have a few laughs at the expense of our predecessors. What were they thinking back then anyway? Those clothes! Didn't they ever take baths? Later on, when we were asked to write this copy, our laughter turned to a hollow groan — our class doesn't exactly enjoy a sterling reputation. After awhile though, our thoughts returned to the old books, and to a growing realization that, despite their out-of-date fashions and bizarre hair styles, we have a lot in common with those classes of years ago. We have the same cliques now as they did then: the smart kids, the jocks, the partyers, the preps, the kids who belong to every club, the kids who keep to themselves.

There are students who know the value of hard work. There are students who may learn of it, perhaps at a significant cost, somewhere down the line. And last but not least, in each and every class there is that great majority of students who occupy the middle ground, whose accomplishments are not legend, but on whose shoulders rest our school's tradition and reputation. In four years at ELHS we have had our fun, found our niche, continued the tradition.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

It is a bleak fall day as this is being written - a time when our country is looking back at where we were four years ago, assessing where we are now, and wondering where we will go from here. As class officers, it is fitting that we do the same.

When we entered ELHS as freshmen we were simply a group of people with the same graduation date. Our first fundraiser was a disaster. We just couldn't seem to get it all together. But our advisors and our classmates worked with us - pushing and prodding when we most needed it, until somewhere along the line we began to stick together - not unlike the candy and gum we sold. Our thanks go out to our advisors over the years: Mrs. Cleavall, Mrs. Daly, Ms. Scudere, Mr. Cooley and Mrs. Thompson - we never could have done it without you. Special thanks also to Lisa Meccia, your years of service are much appreciated.

For ourselves we are left with the question, what does the year hold in store for our class? The Ziti Dinner was a great success but what of the semi-formal, or the banquet or the prom? Or does it even matter, now that we've begun working together?

Dan Reid (vice president), Mark Morelli (president), Tom Veratti (member-at-large), Sarah Walas (secretary), Joanna Brega (treasurer).

Though the senior class officers lead the school, they're still kids at heart!

ON THE MOVE

with

DESIRE AND DETERMINATION

The big game. The big meet. The tournament. How awesome it is to speak those heart-stopping words.

Look closely at them. Each phrase describes a single event — just one game, winner take all. Pretty exhilarating, to be championship caliber material while you're still in high school. Yet it hardly compares with the excitement you felt when you first walked onto a playing field, or dove into a pool, or stepped onto a court, and knew that you were a part of the team.

The hours are long. The demands made by the coach, your teammates, and the sport itself are ultimately exhausting. Yet sports provide the arena in which the student/athlete learns not only to depend on his own strengths, but that he can rely on his teammates to back him up. The lessons learned on the field may or may not culminate in the big game, the big meet, or the big tournament — they don't have to. The lessons are already learned.

SPORTS

GRIDMAN-IA FOOTBALL

The 1992 football season was marked by ups and downs, highs and lows, wins and losses. Yet, the gridman never let up and, under the leadership of senior co-captains Bart Moylan and Bryce Potter, fought hard throughout the campaign.

Returning to the offensive attack were TE Chris Chaisson, running back Marc Maccarini who led the team in total yards, and half back John Travato. Freshmen Jeff Niznik and Randy Sample got a taste of varsity action along with Dan Paquette, Rob Hersey, John Martin and Ed Dubish. Newcomer Anthony Sibilial led the defensive linebacker charge followed by Jeff Skowron. Leading this young team were the few, but experienced seniors, Bryce Potter and Bart Moylan.

With a seasonal record of 3-5-1, the Spartans surprised many as this year was a building year. With the loss of only the two seniors, and the return of this year's experienced players, the future is bright for these gridmen.

Marc Maccarini cuts off tackle - the junior rushed for over 1000 yards this season.

The mighty Spartan defense held the Lions scoreless in an 18-0 romp.

South paw Flutie? Senior quarterback Bart Moylan threw for 500 yards in '92.

SPARTAN BOOTERS SLIP TO 3RD IN DIVISION

BOYS' SOCCER

The 1992 edition of the ELHS boys' soccer team endured a campaign marked by inconsistency and disappointment. The team had held out high expectations for itself when the season began but several narrow losses combines with a recurring back injury to Ed Hellyer (who frequently attempted to play through the pain only to be forced back to the ice bags by halftime) were enough to set the Spartans back on their heels. Ken Boggis was selected as the team's MVP, while Doug Steele captured the Coach's Award and Pete Burns was deemed to be Most Improved. The promising abilities of Kevin Cavanaugh and James Redmond, both of whom saw varsity action, will soon have the Spartans thinking positively again.

Defeat was indeed a bitter pill to swallow - here a 4-0 dose delivered by Westfield.

LADY SPARTANS RETURN TO PLAYOFFS

GIRLS' SOCCER

Perseverance and dedication, - two key words in Spartan vocabulary. They were epitomized in this year's girls' soccer team as they went 9-8-2. Playoffs weren't an easy goal to reach, but led by new coach Shelly Quirk and tri-captains, Erin Mckee, Natalie Drenthe, and Sarah Beaulieu, this team not only stuck it out but came out on top. For the first time in over ten years, the team made the playoffs and won their preliminary round game over Northampton. For those who have tasted victory, come back firing! For those who will graduate - congratulations for a job well done.

SPARTAN STICK-TO-ITIVENESS FIELD HOCKEY

There are plenty of cliches around designed to relieve the sting of a losing season in athletics. "You'll get 'em next time" or "Don't worry, losing builds character". Baloney. The only think losing ever built was an inferiority complex. And it surely doesn't "build" character, it only reveals it. The 1992 Spartan field hockey team is a prime example of this truth. They were shut out in every game they played this year with only one exception, yet they fought as hard in the last game as they did in the first. If you happened to hear their bus pulling in from an away game it was often difficult to tell whether they'd won or lost, what with all the singing, or talking, or for the fact that not everybody's head was hung low. Were they frustrated at their inability to win more games? Most definitely. Did they let that ruin their fun? Not a chance.

Dena moves in to contain a Falcon breakout.

Throughout the season Darbie reigned as "Queen of the Breakaways".

HARRIERS DE-FEETED? NO WAY! CROSS COUNTRY

Over the brooks and through the woods and across the fields of corn (and later, stubble), the girls' and boys' Cross Country teams never stopped in their quest for victory. Unfortunately, although those miles kept Kevin Zumbruski, John Evans, Joe Fois and the rest of the team in tip-top shape, they did little to save the 2-9 season. It was more of the same for the girls. Dara Berger, Ellen Sterritt, Margo Velonis and Mindy Westermann tirelessly tested their sneakers on the trails, but still the season limped to a disappointing 1-9 finish. Although Mr. Calabrese and his faithful assistant, Coach Budd, were tough taskmasters who kept times and distances with the sophistication and accuracy of computers, the fates did not smile on Cross Country. Oh well . . . we'll just tie the laces tighter and try again next year.

Kevin Zumbruski leans into his finishing kick.

Andy McGrath gains momentum after passing the school.

Ellen Sterritt pushes herself to extremes.

FIDDLING AND DIDDLELING BOYS' BASKETBALL

Some teams have all the luck. Their desperate shots find nothing but net, the close calls always seem to go their way, and every rebound drops right into their hands. Yet as every athlete has heard at one time or another, you must manufacture your own good luck. You must be willing to be lucky. This was perhaps the most telling shortcoming of the 93 boys' hoop team. Their record (2-10 as we go to press) was certainly not indicative of their considerable effort. The team fought hard all season, and was ably led by Tom Veratti, Mike Krol, John Wiedersheim and Doug Knowe. In truth, we were "in" most of the games that eventually slid into the loss column. But a defensive lapse, or a failure to beat a press, or an extra pass that wasn't made always seemed to catch up with the Spartans in the end. Here's hoping the team enjoys nothing but good luck next year.

WINDEX-MAN. Mike Krol boxed out, then "cleaned the glass" for yet another rebound in the first Amherst game.

"Shoot the Rock baby!" Tom Veratti was a true leader the last three years. He'll be missed by the Spartans.

LADY HOOPSTERS BASKETBALL

As Lori Smith grabs a steal or Andi Turpie dunks a rebound - cheers echo throughout the gym. Yes, you heard right - cheers! Led by new coach Chuck Lelas and senior captains Erin McKee and Jen Lelas, this team has competed in close game after close game and turned their season around, as well as filled the stands. With seven seniors on the team, experience ranks as their biggest strength and has led the team to more than triple last year's winning record. For the team that has been together for the past three years, their hardwork has finally paid off. This year as those seven seniors walk off the court for the last time, they leave with a sense of pride and accomplishment.

Coast to coast - Point guard Tarzan McKee leaves the defense in the dust!

Smitty ducks as one of the Eagles flies by.

Leading scorer Lorin Hyland drives in and "shoots for 2."

SPARTANS GET A GRIP WRESTLING

In a sport where the pursuit of individual glory seems contradictory to the concept of "team", this year's ELHS wrestling squad was something special. Long on inexperience and short on consistency, the Spartans continually struggled to amass enough points to earn a team victory, yet nearly everyone posted an individual win along the way. Ray Keddy, Bronson Vlahotis, Steve Bartolucci and Joe Concato each had fine personal records. What made this unit special, however, was the fact that they took the team concept seriously. Whether during a grueling session of calisthenics, a one-sided loss to a superior opponent, or even a particularly unbelievable edition of Coach Rosa's "storytime", these Spartans stuck together in a way that made them all winners in the end.

MER-MEN MAKE SPLASH IN 7-3 "A" DIV. DEBUT BOYS SWIMMING

On January 19th the Spartan boys hosted defending WMASS champion Longmeadow in yet another classic matchup between the two bitter rivals. E.L. fell behind early on, but after Ken Boggis and Dave Baker finished 1-3 in the 50-Free and Jeff Pothul and Mike Lord swept the diving event, the crowd could sense an upset in the making. Chris Seeley took 1st in the 100-Fly, and Boggis and John Kubera extended the lead with a 1-3 finish in the 100-yard Freestyle. Another first and third for E.L. in the 200-Free Relay seemed to arouse the Lancers, who then swam their way back into the meet with firsts in the back- and breaststroke events. It would all come down to the last relay. After Longmeadow narrowly touched-out the E.L. foursome of Koske-Kubera-Brennan-Boggis for first, the tension mounted, but not for long. Down the homestretch thundered the Spartan quartet of Seeley-McNeill-Gray-Kane, a full 4 second ahead of their rivals, to deliver the single point needed to secure the victory. The final score; E.L.-47, Longmeadow-46. Welcome to the "A Division".

SPARTAN MERMAIDS GIRLS SWIMMING

The 92'93 Girls Swim season opened with an uncertainty that hadn't been felt in years. Gone were the days of "Rock House", and the team had moved to the "A" Division. How would they do? With the leadership of seniors Dena Wright and Ellen Goodwin we can answer those questions with a resounding "very well." In the freestyle events Abbie Ohlin, Allison Smith and Kelly "attitude" John came on strong as the season progressed, while Meredith Rosso, Dana Turpie and Julianne Gelinis showed the kind of promise that has made E.L. a perennial powerhouse in the sport. In the diving Ellen Goodwin showed flashes of brilliance as she posted an excellent overall record. Not to be outdone, Dena "Dee" Wright again showed what dedication and perseverance can do for an athlete as she left E.L.H.S. with records in the backstroke and 200 IM and was also named WMass' top scholastic swimmer. Not bad for a rebuilding year! Rock Who?

SPARTANS SKATE TO A 13-6-2 RECORD

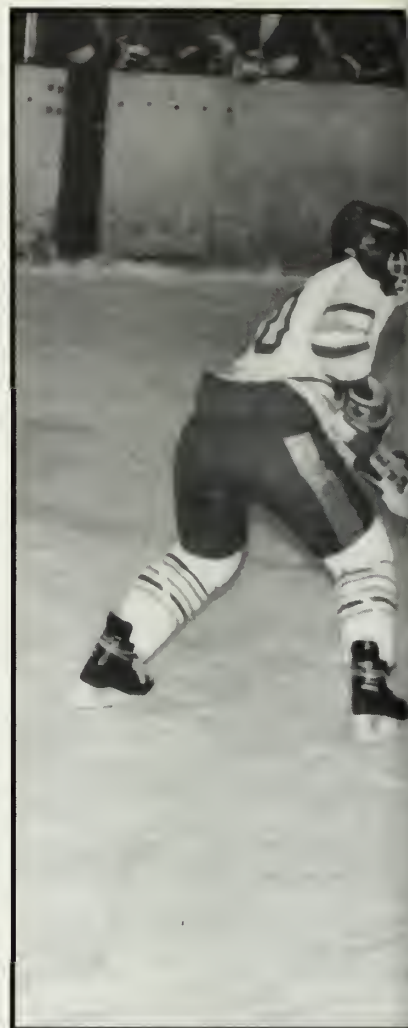

ICE HOCKEY

92-93 was supposed to be a rebuilding year for the Spartan hockey team. The squad was relatively inexperienced and a .500 season seemed like a realistic goal. Some early successes soon had the Spartans thinking playoffs, and in the end the division crown was within reach.

The hard-working first line of senior co-captain Dan Reid, asst. captain Gene Shaw, and freshman stand-out Brian Tondera accounted for the bulk of the Spartan attack, scoring 62 of the team's 89 goals.

One of the league's stingiest defenses was lead by senior co-captain Don Cavanaugh and juniors Mark Maia and Mike St. Clair. Backstopping their efforts were goaltenders Al Hubbard and Brian Smith, who combined to allow only 43 goals over the 21 game season.

A devastating 4-3 triple overtime loss to Ludlow in the third round of the playoffs ended a great year on a bittersweet note, however, the team has high hopes for next season since only four Spartans will be lost to graduation.

DIAMONDS IN THE ROUGH BASEBALL

T.S. Eliot once remarked that April was the cruellest month, but even that great man couldn't have foreseen the kind of March endured by the Spartan baseball team. The weather was awful, the fields were a sodden mess, and the squad was forced to share the gym with every other spring team. Such is life. When the skies finally clear up the Spartans will be led by seniors Tom Veratti, Doug Steele, and Bart Moylan, and promising underclassmen Jeremy Giard, Brian Karavish, Mike St. Clair, and Chris Chaisson. As Aegis went to press it was noted with sadness the Doug Knowe would be lost for the season due to knee surgery.

Mike St. Clair gets into the early season swing of things.

FRONT AND CENTER(FIELD) SOFTBALL

It'll be a late start for this year's senior-laden softball squad. But when the snow melts and the season finally gets underway, it will be experience that leads this "veteran" team. The strong defense of the returning players is complemented by quick bats and the competition they bring into each game, even if it's just in the form of sunflower seed contest. Tri-captains Lori Smith, Margarida Rosa, and Jen Lelas will use their three year varsity experience to guide the team through what promises to be a very successful season.

Smitty was a 3-year varsity starter and pitched our way into the playoffs in each campaign.

Starting catcher and tri-captain Margarida Rosa gives the runner the evil eye and dares her to try for second.

Second baseman Lorin Hyland gets down as the pitch is on its way.

OFF AND RUNNING TRACK

Unlike most other teams, the ELHS boys and girls track squads were able to get outside during the snowy March weather- only to do battle with the slush, sand, and cars for a decent foothold on their pre-season conditioning. The boys team will be led by seniors Kevin Zumbruski, Joe Foies, and Dave Bennis, as well as by underclassmen Mark Stuckenbruck, Jason Metoxen, Marc Macarini, and John Martin.

A very experienced girls team returns from last year. Seniors Laura McDonald, Dena Wright, Gina Potorski, Jen Burns, Jessica Hawks, and Dara Berger represent a nucleus of talent that will make this team very competitive. Martha Baker, Janel Gurney, Johari Curtis and a host of other promising underclassmen provide a depth which other teams will only envy.

Darlene Dearden takes life's little hurdles all in stride.

Class is outside as Dara Berger shows her competition how to really throw the shot put.

BOYS AND GIRLS MAKE NET GAINS

TENNIS

Both Spartan tennis squads face interesting dilemmas as the 93 season gets underway, not the least of which is finding court space among the snowdrifts. Both teams have capable seniors: Pete Burns, Jeff Pothul, Mike Smith, Russ Holderness, and Jon Lenares for the boys; Cara Hobbs, Meredith Fratar, and Amy Manning for the girls. From there things get a bit fuzzy. Charles Gray, Jason Bergeron and Mike Lord seem ready to make a considerable contribution, as do Chrissy Campbell and Courtney Fratar. The question is, at what position, singles? doubles? etc ... We look forward to the answers with great anticipation.

GOLF & CHEERLEADERS

Mark Twain once remarked that the sport of golf represented "a decent walk, ruined". What did he know, he probably teed off with an iron! This year's Spartan golf team has no such problems off the tee and their short games aren't bad either. The squad will be led by returning seniors Dan Reid, Steve Beek and Mike Kane and also boasts a talented crop of underclassmen, including Steve McMillan, Dave Baker, Kyle Tabb, and Steve Mazzariello. FORE!

'92 - '93 was a year of ups and downs for the Varsity Cheerleaders. Roster changes throughout the fall made the going a little rough at first, but an infusion of underclassmen soon set the group on their feet again. Veterans Laura Walsh, Jamie Grover, and Caryn Langone were especially helpful in getting the team prepared for one of their greatest triumphs, an outstanding performance in Spartnum. The best thing about the 93 squad is that they'll all be back next year, at which time their routines will be routinely excellent. Thanks also should go to Mrs. Grover and Mrs. Brady, who have helped guide their girls back onto the right track.

for

DIVERSITY AND DISTINCTION

When our seniors were asked to list their activities on directory sheets back in the beginning of the year, the yearbook staff was inundated with addresses, phone numbers, team and club data. It was the latter that proved most interesting to us.

If you agree that an education must involve the whole person, then school and the knowledge held in books are not sufficient for the job. A student must socialize and become part of a team or organization in order to be truly educated.

The idea of a club evolves naturally from shared interests. At ELHS there are clubs that reflect the real variety of tastes that exist in our student body (even though we often seem like we were originally formed from the same suburban mold). There is a science club for the scientists, a math team for the mathletes, and a literary magazine for those who can express all of this better than we. For real social animals there are the big clubs, Key and International, that don't let their size get in the way of their good works or their good times.

Whether a student joins an organization for a notation on his transcript or because all of her friends are already members of that particular club, the simple act of participation will provide satisfaction and an education that will last a lifetime.

CLUBS

Traditionally an Honor Society epitomizes the highest standards of any school or institution. So it is in East Longmeadow High School. Our organization, advised by Miss Herschuk is also a group dedicated to service. In past years members have distinguished themselves selling valentines for the Easter Seals promotion, participating in a Bowl-a-thon to raise funds for the Miss East Longmeadow Pageant, cooking for the hungry under the auspices of Loaves and Fishes, and giving of their time and energies to assist wherever possible at school functions. Because of a relatively late induction time this year, (March 3rd), we have not seen as much of them as in the past ... but we know that they'll be on hand, poised and smiling at that most important time of our school life ... Graduation.

What are homeroom reps? They are students who represent each of the senior homerooms (2 apiece) as well as yearbook and newspaper. The reps keep their fellow seniors informed about upcoming events, such as the Ziti Dinner, Semi-formal, cap and gown measurements, the banquet and the prom. They also join our class officers during X-Blocks for important meetings with Mr. Cooley and Mrs. Thompson. Considering the limited time available to this group, and the pressures and demands of simply being a senior, these students have done an admirable job. Through their diligent efforts they have had the chance to experience the rewards of responsibility, leadership, and the opportunity to make their final year at ELHS memorable.

The Council of Peer Educators, or COPE as it is more generally known, was formed several years ago to help check the rising tide of youth substance abuse. And although the group is probably most well known for the incredibly popular volleyball tournament they sponsor in the spring, the nature of that event belies the more serious issues that COPE is trying to underscore. The competition is merely a means to an end. With the money raised in the "Classic" there are that many more opportunities to try to educate younger brothers and sisters, and indeed, ourselves. COPE's sponsorship of speakers who address the student body on particularly relevant issue is also a benefit derived from that single Saturday in March. Congratulations and thanks are due in large measure to Miss Czajkowski and her charges for a job well done and for even taking on such an important challenge in the first place.

Due to our school's architectural layout, one is never very far from the auditorium, and it is this special feature that has helped create some wonderful memories for all of us. Try this, and you'll see what we mean. Shut your eyes and ... (nope, better wait till you've finished reading this first). But try closing your eyes sometime and imagine you're in Rm. 114, or 102, or even 217. It's the start of A-Block and the band has begun practicing a new number, say "Procession of the Nobles" by Rimsky-Korsakov. Only you're not so sure it's Rimsky-Korsakov because at first the band sounds so ragged. You lean over to a classmate like some smart guy and say something like, "You know, I would swear someone in there is sawing a trumpet in half." And then after Mr. Turner stops the orchestra a few times to chew out the drum section, "Stop being a lettuce, You're ahead of the music!", they settle down and before you know it, you're keeping time with them with your foot and hey! they sound pretty good now! There are few secrets or shortcuts to such success. The students practice four times a week in addition to their individual lessons with Mr. Turner. And there is usually some occasion to prepare for: a football game, a concert, Spartnum, the 4th of July Parade, the Division II basketball playoffs. Several of our classmates have found the time to audition for, and have been selected to, the prestigious District Band. This is not to imply, though, that the band is all work and no fun. There have been field trips to Broadway shows and to the Boston Pops. But a more likely reward is an invitation to participate in the Jazz Band, a select group of musicians distinct from the larger orchestra. The Jazz Band practices X-Block and is responsible for its own set of musical impressions. Speaking of which, it is time for us to close our eyes again and indulge ourselves with a new favorite - a little ditty they played for the class of 93 awhile back called "Pomp and Circumstance". The memory of that sweet song sure does stay with you.

"Music hath charms," runs the old adage, "to soothe the savage breast," and our lives surely underline the truth of this. From the tuneful alarm clock wake-up in the morning to the last CD we hear at night, we surround ourselves with music. Nowhere is the love of music more evident or more truly enjoyable than in the work of Chorus. Whether translating the complicated harmonies of an old master or lovingly singing a simple Christmas carol, the Chorus reflects the high standards of their leader, Mrs. Niemitz. Their hours of practice produce concerts that are both note-worthy and worthy of note.

Toss your hair back, check your B.U.M. shirt tail, fix your lipstick, and try to act older than you'll ever be . . . here comes the sophisticates of the school . . . the International Clubbers. En masse they form the largest social group in the school; entry to the club is an authentic membership in one of the language courses offered at ELHS, and a real interest in foreign mores. These cultural experts are au courant with all the right places to go, and all the right things to see and do. The pièce de résistance of the 1992-3 season found them coasting down to New York to catch the Waif and her confreres in Les Misérables . . . and to enjoy a tortilla or two from Tio Pepe's later. Rarae aves all, we envy them in their fluency in other languages of the world and their total savoir faire in Gotham City . . . (we've seen the pictures!).

YOU KNOW WHO YOU ARE

For the last few years the Student Council has taken on the unenviable task of trying to raise scholarship money for deserving ELHS seniors. With college tuitions threatening to climb beyond the reach of the average family this would seem like an admirable, in fact necessary, venture. But in reality the money raised and distributed can barely begin to approach the king's ransom being demanded by our nation's colleges. This work may be better left to the universities and alumni organizations who are better equipped to do battle in this arena. That would allow the Student Council the freedom to return to the kind of work they do best, and for which they receive scarcely enough credit - student service. The Can Drive, the Swimathon and the 10 Year Evaluation were excellent examples of how this organization has utilized our school's best resources - its students, for the benefit of all. Another example may come during Field Day, when a barbecue and band may be added to the festivities, courtesy of the Council. Whatever direction the group chooses to follow, we applaud their efforts and praise their enthusiasm, in particular President Pete Burns, his fellow officers, and their advisor, Miss Angelica. Many thanks.

1992-3 was a year in which more Americans participated in their government than ever before. At ELHS there is a group that has been preparing for responsible active participation for quite some time - the Model Congress. From January 14-16 delegates Chris Adams, Marie Bent, Megan Anderson, and Joanne Evans and observers Allyson Salier and Dan Paquette took part in the annual exercise hosted by AIC. The group was treated to actual doses of government tedium (!) in addition to instructive speeches from Springfield Mayor Robert Markel and our own State Senator, Brian Lees. When the legislative session got under way the ELHS contingent was able to pass a bill curbing the amount of pollutants released into our atmosphere (if only this were Washington). Over 300 area students attended the Model Congress this year and the enthusiasm on the AIC campus was unmistakable. Will our students be able to sustain the interest generated by the 92 election? Why not participate in next year's Model Congress and find out? At the very least you'll discover a little bit about how our government works.

To improve his elocution, the ancient Greek Demosthenes would practice speaking with a mouthful of pebbles. He'd sit by the equally ancient Greek shore all day, elocuting like a madman, which is just what he sounded like when he tried to say something as simple as "smolfem whifnich kung frishen rickaftrak." (Translation: "3 drachmas a day! Is that all a Grecian earns?")

Demosthenes descendants, the ELHS Debate team, had more vital matters to discuss in 1993, namely: should the United States, through its trade policies, assist other nations in the global effort to curb pollution? In eighteen contests over a nine week period the Spartan debaters argued the pros and cons of this issue.

Under the guidance of advisor Charles McKinney, the goal of these exercises became more than the attainment of a new perspective on an ongoing problem. According to captain Pete Burns, the focus of the team shifted to the rewards of the debate process itself - doing research, marshalling facts and presenting them clearly and confidently. Congratulations to all debaters for a fine season! (and have you noticed how pebble-free our streets have been lately?)

The hallway outside Rm. 124 has always been an interesting place. In the past, unwary pedestrians have nearly been trampled by students caught up in the momentum of one of Mr. Carey's horsepower labs for his physics classes. But ever since he has taken over as Science club supremo there have been sightings that have bordered on the bizarre. Just a few weeks into November we chanced to be passing when a balloon-powered car forced us to take a few embarrassing steps to keep from being a hit-and-run victim. The car's operator told us cryptically that he was preparing for the Science League's "Windy 500", a model car race for such vehicles to be held a few weeks later. In December we heard whispered rumors of something called a "Pasta Tower." Evidently either a contest to build weight-bearing structures out of unlikely materials or some kind of nutritional research gone terribly wrong. At various other times we heard club members discussing the finer points of "our genetic code" in preparation for another of their contests. We hope that our own code doesn't fall into the wrong hands. The Science club meets and competes several times each year and we're not so sure that we haven't been deciphered already.

One of the great mysteries of life at ELHS concerns Mrs. Burke and the members of the Key Club. How does she convince all of those perfectly lazy students to give up their Tuesday nights in order to make Christmas ornaments for a Giving Tree? Or to make phone calls for the Heart Fund? Or to serve meals to the homeless down at Loaves and Fishes? How does she persuade normally sedentary teenagers to solicit sponsors for, and take part in, the Crop Walk? Or to participate in Kids' Day? Or to put their unbruised skin on the line and play a few downs of Power Puff football for charity?

What heretofore hidden vein is Mrs. Burke tapping at ELHS, that oozes with community spirit and good fun? And how, how is she getting us to pay twenty-five dollars for the privilege of doing all this?

The only answer seems to be that she, and we, must be doing something right - an expression which taken another way might easily serve as the organization's motto.

We don't really know when the Literary Magazine began, or who initially advised it. Just when we thought we had discovered the Who and the When someone reported an earlier date: we gave up when we found a copy of "Pegasus 1966". It was frustrating - until we realized that it didn't really matter. What matters is that the magazine provides a vehicle for free expression. It is the place where any student may give voice to the most casual observation or the deepest emotion of the heart. Some poetry and short stories may show unmistakable literary talent: some may strain for the proper words, but all are real examples of what someone from our school feels about today.

We spent an hour or two in the office the other day, waiting for the copier repairman to breathe life into a machine whose vital signs were slipping. How unfortunate. Yet even that great man had to admit that there was little that could be done. An electrical relay had caused a total shutdown. He dimmed the lights, drew the sheet up over the patient's single, unblinking eye, and withdrew. Fortunately our administration has more reliable components on which it can rely - in particular, our corps of office aides. From the first tardy pass in the morning to the last attendance sheet in the afternoon, they provide an efficient and indispensable service to our secretaries. They give up their free time to make sure our school is able to function and receive little in return. Without their efforts we feel certain that someone would soon be drawing a sheet over our own eyes.

If you're looking for headlines like "CONFUSED TWIN INJURES BROTHER IN BOTCHED SUICIDE ATTEMPT" or "TEACHER'S HEAD EXPLODES IN LAB MISHAP" try the supermarket tabloids or the New York Post. If it's responsible student journalism you're after, try our own Spartan Spectator. Under the direction of Mr. Kerson and editors-in-chief Andrea Turpie and Jessica Hawks; managing editors Jen Burns and Cara Hobbs, and department editors Rebecca Miller, Pete Burns, Jen Johnson and Bryce Potter, the staff has upheld a standard of performance which continues to draw praise from all corners. In its editorials the Spectator has continually prodded the student body to discard its mantle of apathy and indifference and become both responsible students at ELHS and involved citizens of the larger world. In its news stories the Spectator has managed to cover nearly every facet of our lives here without resorting to the sort of rumor or innuendo that keep those tabloids going. But about that exploding head, I heard it really happened to a guy . . .

Ever wonder where the next generation of geniuses is coming from? Stop by the next Math League competition and you'll have your answer (along with a large portion of humility). A typical contest involves teams of six (only three seniors allowed at any time) who compete to solve problems ranging in difficulty from simple algebra all the way to the kinds of questions that cause mathematically-impaired folk to go home and sit quietly with the shades drawn. And yet, based on a recent photo session, these students genuinely enjoy the challenges posed by their chosen discipline, which shows that they do have something in common with the rest of us after all. Continued success to Mr. Porowski and his hard-working charges and, — um — do you think one of you might want to explain my homework to me, please?

Students on the math team struggle to work out a complicated problem.

Dasher, Dancer, Donner . . . Dixer? Cara experiences the agony of defeat at the hands of Clement Moore.

Damien Thompson, winner of last spring's Bosch and Lomb Award, was an invaluable member of the "As Schools Match Wits" team.

Mathletes undergo a rigorous practice session.

Several years ago it became evident to the members of the school committee that, though hard-working they may be, they were lacking in the sort of inside knowledge of our system that only its students possess. So they did a smart thing. They asked for student representation at their meetings. Since then the Student Advisory Committee, as it has become formally known, has been present to let our voices be heard. No, they do not constitute a voting bloc, and no, they don't decide who gets hired and who gets fired. That is not their place. Rather, they do just what the title suggests — they advise. The role can be tiresome at times, (especially if one has a lot of homework due on a Tuesday morning), but there is a sense of participation in the life of our schools that is unequalled by any other activity. Many thanks are in order for their efforts on our behalf.

Millions of years ago, dinosaurs roamed the earth. There wasn't any pollution and the ozone layer was intact. Animals had no fear of man. What could go wrong? These days, as the saying goes, "It ain't easy being green". Our planet seems under attack on every front and from every direction at the same time. At ELHS, the Environmental Club was formed a couple of years ago to try and reverse this disastrous trend. Through T-shirt sales and various other fundraising activities, the group has been able to make donations to several conservation and wildlife funds. They have also been actively involved in the struggle to preserve and protect the Quabbin reservoir area. Since its inception the club has nearly doubled in size according to its adviser, Mr. Sullivan. Here's hoping their message catches on just as quickly - the alternative is not very nice to imagine.

(1) If Columbus arrived in the Americas on October 12, 1492, what date marks the 500th. anniversary of that event. (2) Who tested the first underwater torpedo, July 4th., 1845? (3) How far can you build onto a single-digit prime number by adding single digits to the left and still have a prime number? If you were a member of our "As Schools Match Wits" team you'd probably know the answers to these questions. The 1992 squad won its first two matches handily before bowing to Holyoke. And now for those answers:

(1) Oct. 21, 1992 (The Gregorian calendar was adopted after the trip)

(2) Samuel Colt

(3) Ask a team member, or Mr. Carey, their adviser. We aren't that smart!

AEGIS: A Year In Review

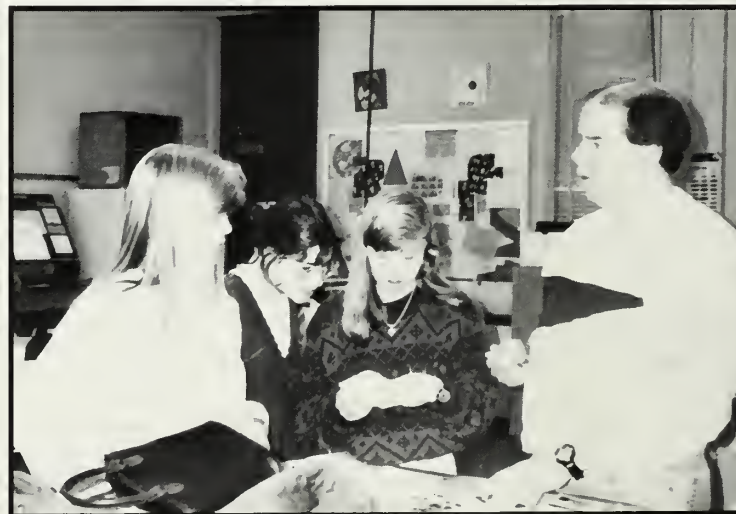

"Did anyone write copy?" "Where are the pictures?" "Does anyone really know when the deadline is?" "Get me a grease pencil!" How often we've heard these words echoing through the corridors of the graphic arts wing these last few months. For a good part of the year we could only wonder what the finished product you're holding was going to look like. But even now as we grow accustomed to the look and feel of this thing we have created, the memories of what it took to bring it about have begun to fade. We can scarcely duplicate today the feeling of terror that overtook us each time a major deadline approached. Neither can we reproduce the sensation of being the keepers of some great secret, as we worked our way through the winter evenings-the only people afoot in the cold, dark building. Now that the book has reached the light of day we have been relegated to the rank once again of reader, a person who seeks comfort in words that have grown familiar over time.

Oct. 4, 1992- The only day editors-in-chief Sarah and Jen agreed with Mr. Lynch on anything. (It was no peppers, no mushrooms as we remember it.)

Yes Allyson, you finally got your picture in the book.

Amy Manning and Christine Cassidy prepare to shake down the student body one more time. "Would you like to put some money down on a yearbook?"

Juniors Christine Johnson, Erin Schloyer, and Carey Parsons vying for next year's editor's position?

Janel and Kelly ponder one of life's great questions. "Should we send out for food before field hockey?"

One thing our yearbook staff needs work on-staging pictures! Nice try, Kate and Erin!

ON THE MOVE

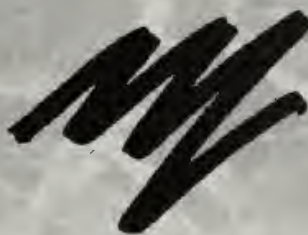

WITH

SPARTAN SPIRIT

Back in the introduction we wondered whether anyone could ever faithfully record the life of our school. Would it be possible to accurately capture the whole spectrum of emotions that give color to our lives, and which seem so obvious and so real that any idiot with a camera could scarcely fail to give satisfaction? We have only two words to say about that ambition: IM — POSSIBLE! And with that off our chests we acknowledge our shortcomings in the endeavor, not with any bitterness or disappointment, but with a new respect for the sheer variety of life around us- yes, even in this little school, where nothing ever seems to be happening. That is the genius of our creator's plan, it's all happening at once. Here then, the results of our suburban photo safari: a section devoted to those things at ELHS which are certainly not academics, but then again are not entirely distinct from the school either. For lack of a better term we call it -

STUDENT LIFE

You can usually find the class of 93 wherever fun is at its maddest! SHOUT!!

SEMI-FORMAL

What would a school year be without its ceremonies? On Dec. 22, 1992, we indulged ourselves in one of high school's grandest traditions, a holiday semi-formal dance. It was a wonderful evening. Won't you join us for one last trip around the floor together?

Hold me back fellas, it's Madonna with her clothes on!

"And I EY-I EY-I will always love you, uuu--"

Gents dancing-do's and don'ts. Do stay loose. Don't hallucinate.

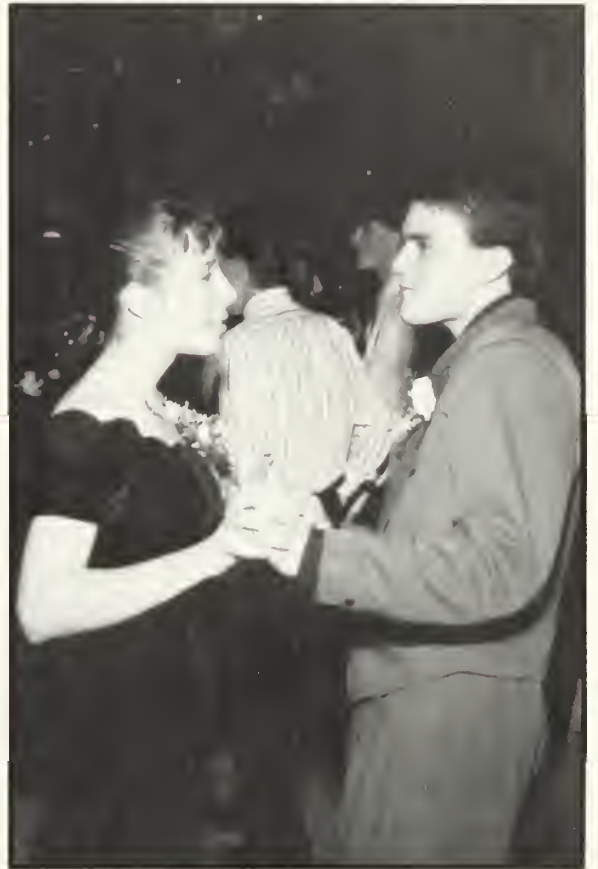

"Do you mind if we dance with your date?"

All of the traditions were observed, from the stylish arrival
... to the parentally-approved spacing of the dancers.

Steve Jakus, your conga line is here!

What it's all about—great friends, good fun.

SENIOR CLASS PICNIC

As we prepared for our last year together there was more than a little uncertainty. How would it be? How would we be? On a brisk autumn Sunday we set about answering those questions.

The kick-off event of the senior year was a picnic held at Bluebird Acres. Attendance was undeniably low-and at first many of us wondered whether this would hold true for our other activities as well. But as soon as the music started, the food hit the tables, and the games began, there was no holding back. If only a portion of the class chose to enjoy the events so generously planned for us by Mr. Cooley and Mrs. Thompson, that was no reason to restrain our enthusiasm. After all, life is what you make of it. If the rest of the class wants to join in as we go along, that's great too. In fact we're looking forward to it.

The next Rockettes-the senior girls practice their kickline.

Beth Nadeau and Steph St. Jock grab a quick drink before heading back to the football game.

"Hurry up and take the picture! We want to eat!" Margo Velonis and Jen Burns dig in and pile their plates high!

It's not the last supper-but it is the beginning of our last year together.

Peek-a-Boo! Sarah Walas and Lisa Meccia try to sneak a piece of lettuce.

ZITI DINNER

Although the dinner wasn't on Wednesday-Prince Spaghetti Day-the night was an outstanding success. Cauldrons of meatballs and sauce, buckets of salad, a chef's enormity of ziti-all were devoured by students, their parents and faculty families. Originating in the dim history of the school, the ziti dinner has become a gastronomical tradition and successful fundraiser for seniors. Our energetic (and hungry) peers groaned with satisfaction when they realized that this year's meal increased their treasury by five hundred dollars and their weight by a pound of two. Any lingering doubts concerning our class's ability to get things done and still have fun in the process were completely dispelled by the ziti dinner of 92- the most profitable in the history of the school.

Taste - testers Cara Hobbs and Natalie Drenthe rate the scrumptious home-made desserts a 10 "Mm-mm-good"!

The hungry guys' dilemma - two hands and only one mouth.

7:34 WHERE ARE YOU?

For anyone who's ever been caught in the unfortunate and stressful position of trying to beat the morning bell, or whose interior clock can sometimes be heard ticking from the OUTSIDE, we offer the following (NICK At NITE fans sing along):
There's a fly-lab to be checked.
There's some gossip to dissect.
Heard my locker they'll inspect,
Where's my homework? What the heck!
There's so much I've got to do,
Don't have time for it, do you?
7:34 Where are you?

Nikki Abair and Carrie Alcorn use the time to catch up on their homework.
John Wiedersheim takes the opportunity to try a little snowmobiling.

Of course some of us are still just arriving at 7:34 ... see ya!
While still others appear to have already had enough for one day.

GYM . . . AND BEAR IT

Leisurely walks in the fall; frisbees gliding through the air in spring; birdies descending gracefully until they are returned delicately - plink! - over a badminton net; sound like a traditional gym class? . . . It is! After last year's budget debacle caused upperclassmen to fulfill their normal phys. ed.

requirements with an X-Block walkathon, no one knew what the future would bring. Until the state and the town make a definitive, long-term commitment to a quality education INCLUDING physical education, there is little any of us can do but gym, er . . . grin, and bear it.

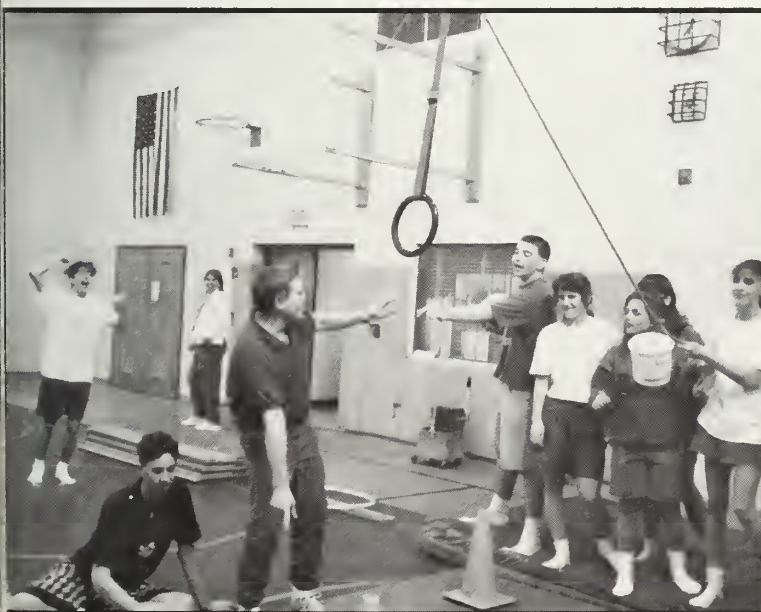

Future Cheerleaders of America

Dan Barrett, Carrie Conway, and Cheryl Thomas relax after a strenuous game of badminton.

WORKING 5-9

For many of us the bell at 1:55 only serves to mark the beginning of another day, as we hurry off to our after-school jobs around town. There is often the sensation that we're being pulled in several directions at the same time and it is not infrequent that we might bring our homework to work (or is it the other way around?). At any rate, here are some pictures of us in our "other careers":

Jessica and T.J. know the secret of staying in shape—bagging groceries at the B & B.

A flute without holes is still a flute, but a doughnut without a hole is a danish. These 6 know the difference.

But the gang at the Big Y seems a little more outgoing.

The Subway could be the place to be . . .

but we prefer something outdoors, like our buddies at American Saw.

How about a compromise? We'll stay in the center of things at Boston Chicken.

STUDENTS BY ANY OTHER NAME . . .

. . . are students nonetheless. For the Willie Ross and Secondary Development students featured here, there is homework to dread, friends to see every day, and school lunch to try and avoid. There are problems communicating that most of us can't possibly imagine, but school is a place where problems are meant to be overcome. With any luck we can do so together.

Hamming it up for the camera-Joe Cincotta. Joe and his friends made regular trips to the mall this year. They also held their own turkey dinner at Thanksgiving and celebrated the Chinese New Year with egg rolls. Most enjoyable may have been the times they spent with ELHS students acquiring basic living skills.

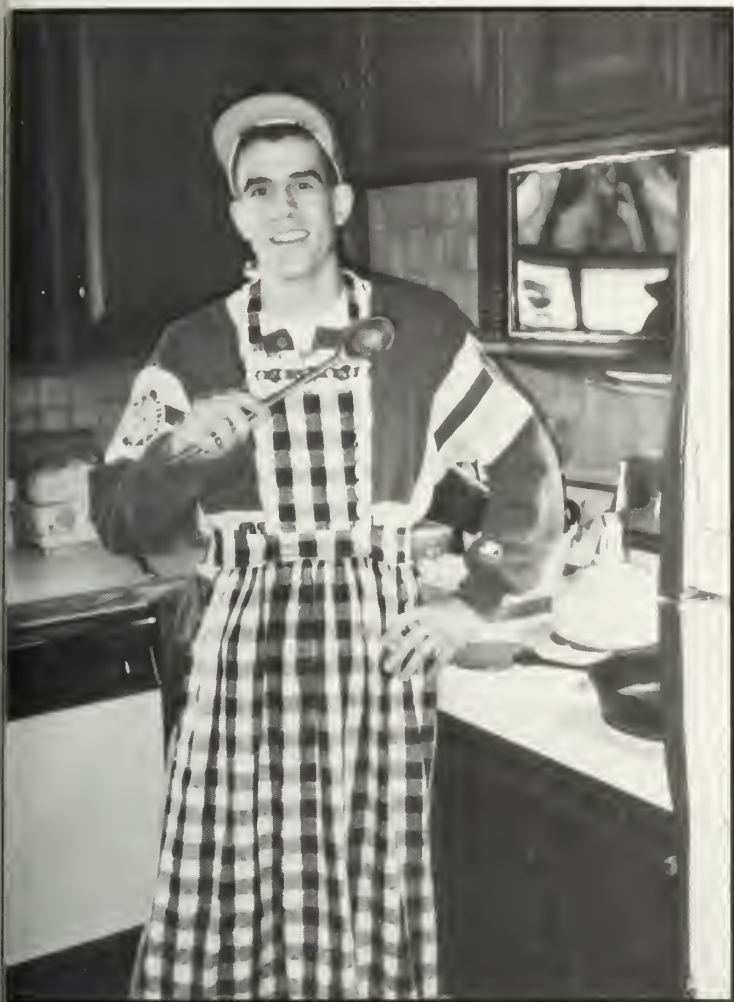

Phillip Pouliot gives his new locker combo a whirl.

Felicia Wheeler interprets Mr. Freccero's opening day remarks for Nicole Baker and Kathy Musso.

LET'S DO LUNCH!

For Seniors with lunch block study halls there has never been any time as glorious as the present. If you're stuck without wheels or have homework to do, the salad bar and school cafeteria are much improved (on a very sensitive scale). If you're free for the block the choices are endless: shall we dine finely chez moi? Or shall we mangle a spot of garbage together at McD's? a quick trip to the Subway or shall we munch along home to see what Bob Barker is giving away on 'Price is Right'? The menu, and the fun, are unlimited.

Today boys and girls, we're going to make a nice brisket.

Every senior's home away from home—a booth at Friendly's.

Hmm . . . should I study for that AP Bio quiz or see what Chuck Woolery's up to on "Scrabble"?

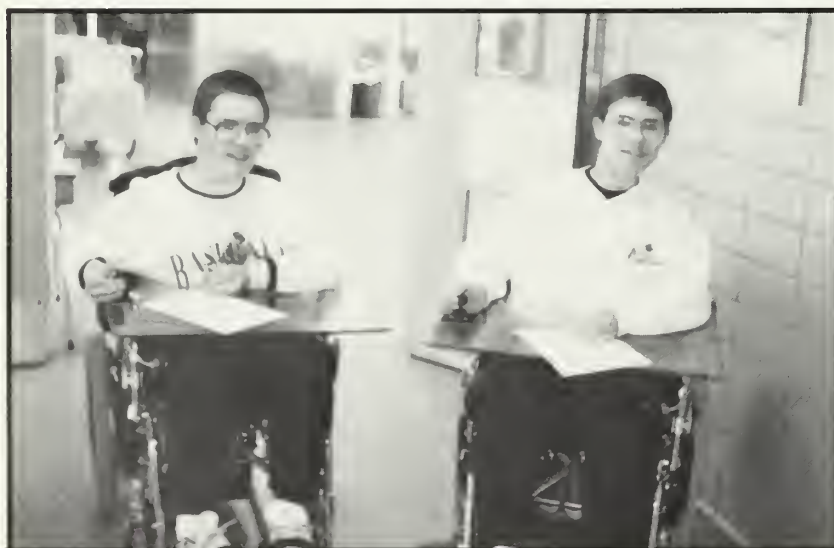

Don't think of it as eating on the bus, think of it as dinner theater.

Brothers And Sisters

One of the most unique (an oxymoron if we ever heard one) ways to complete your four years at ELHS is to do so with a younger brother or sister in the school at the same time. No longer is your name your own, yet not longer must you go it alone, either. There will always be someone around on whom you can depend, someone who knows what your reactions will be under any set of circumstances (how embarrassing!), someone who will be missing just when you're ready to go home for the day. Deep down we really wouldn't have it any other way.

Lorin and Liza teamed up for the Spartans this winter.

Spartanum Spectaculum

The first sign of Spring isn't the return of the birds or the first warm rain-it's the night when an excited senior steps up to a microphone and says, "Live from ELHS, it's Spartanum Spectaculum 1993!"

The end of Student Life as we know it? Not exactly. But it is our last chance to see ourselves as others see us. For Aegis 93 it is also the last time to say how great it has been seeing all of you.

We're now 148 pages into this book and still struggling to keep up with all of you. The pictures here don't necessarily fit neatly into one specific category, other than - Life.

Dearest Erin,

Follow your dreams, take one step at a time, and don't settle for less. You can be anything you want to be - just strive to reach your goal.

We love you,
Mom, Dad, Kris, and Kara

Dear Jessica,
We're so proud of you and all your achievements. You revere life so much and are so eager to live it. Learn from all that crosses your path. Take time for autumn trees, ocean waves, and colorful sunsets - and see the beauty and mystery of your own life.

We're ready to let go Jess. Good luck in college and all that lies ahead!

Love,
Mom and Dad

Joanna,

We can never become discouraged or cynical if we are constantly on the lookout for all that is good about life and living.

I'm very proud of you. You are the best daughter a father could ever have, but even more than that you are a great person and a great friend. I love you.

Dad

Margo,

We wish you all of life's best. Be confident that you can be all of what you want to be. Having you as a part of our lives has been the best part of our lives.

Love,
Mom and Dad

Sarah,

You are a very special daughter and sister. We are very proud of all your accomplishments. You have the self-confidence and dedication to make all your hopes and dreams come true. We hope your future has love and happiness always.

From: Darbie Driscoll

To: The Crew

Where do I begin? High school has been a blast. We have gone through a lot together: the parties, The Wall, Public, and everything else. Our song "The Joker" will live in my heart forever. This summer will be the ultimate. You guys are the best. I will miss you so much next year. Keep in touch.

From: Jen

To: Lisa, Antoinette, and Sarah

You guys are awesome! What would I have done without all of you? Just remember the good times we had at A/C (you gotta problem), Snookers, and Friendly's (Dave).

P.S. (Lee and Ant, remember "Alphabet".)

P.P.S. (Sarah, the cornfields will be with us forever.)

From: Jo

To: Leenie and Care

We've all been best friends for three years! We've been through so much - swimming - "get in the hold" "time trials" and of course - the locker room! Our favorite hang-out - how many miles did we walk for a chicken deluxe? And of course - the breakthrough of feelings. Whatever it was, it was fun.

From: Meredith Fratar

To: The Crew

One thing I want to say is you guys are the best! High school never would have been the same without you! We've had a million laughs and great times that I'll never forget. Summer '91 was the best by far-let's make the summer of 93 even better! Good luck to all of you next year and throughout your college years!

"some people call me the space cowboy . . ."

From: Alicia

To: D-e-e-n-a

What's up honey? I will miss you sitting in front of me, shoving you from your locker and pulling you to your chair every morning. Just remember life will always be grand. Stay sexy and don't ever change.

P.S. (Remember our song. I gotta thing for you baby.)

From: Nikki Ghedini

To: The Crew

I don't know what to say except we have so many memories! From getting our licenses to one-way streets (Cara!). Just remember butterscotch is the best! I love you guys- high school wouldn't have been the same without you. It's friends like you people don't forget.

From: Sarah

To: Jennifer

"When I think about what friendship means to me, you immediately came to mind." You have always been the best friend I could have and I know that no matter what challenges our future holds, our friendship will prevail. The Stone Cold Babies will live forever.

From: Sarah Beaulieu

To: Miss Quirk

I want to thank you for everything you have done for us. Not only are you an inspiring coach, you are a good friend. When I look back at high school, I know I will always remember you. When problems arise just say "Whoop-de-ding-dong!"

From: Joy "The Terminator" Sarah "Stonewall"
Beaulieu To: Girls' Soccer

All those duck quacks finally paid off. Thanks Miss Q. for opening the door, it took us 4 years but we finally ran through it. Seniors, always remember the rope jumping drill. Good Luck Girls' Soccer.

From: Thomas To: Margo

Wishing you the best at college, but finally glad to have the second floor to myself. And to all your friends, (you know who you are), I'm glad to get the first floor back too. One more thing an hour!

From: H.S. To: M.J., Black Betty, Mel and Arvie

We survived Holyoke, learned that leopard skin is a fashion statement, and spent endless summer nights at the tower. College won't replace these memories, only add to them. Change your philosophy, change your hair color, but never change the love, laughter, and loyalty that made you my best friends.

Love always,
H.S.

From: Jess Hawks To: Curly, Stumpy, Skimpy, and Lumpy

The men on the wall are not real. Goodbye yellow brick road. Walk through the cemetery with me. Lloyd cannot be found in one night. It's educational. Rhett, poor Rhett. The flower will eat you. We are all crazy!

Censor Note: (Curly is Lori Lang, Stumpy is Melissa LeClair, Becky Miller is Skimpy and Lumpy is Beth Carlisle. These are personal jokes, they have no profane meaning whatsoever!)

From: Bryce

To: My Gym Buddy

How could I possibly sum up a whole half year of gym? The competition was incredible, but I'm still a better goalie. It's too bad it took four years to find such a great gym partner, but I think I've finally found the right one. No matter what happens next year in college I know I won't forget you and our gym class. Don't forget that the 'Lark is better than the Subaru. I love you.

Love,
Your goalie lover

From: Joy To: My Friends

What will I do without the candy and salsa parties, pool games and trips to Nanny's? You guys are the best friends I could ever have, thanks.

To my gym lover - No matter where you go I will always love you, I hope you feel the same.

From: F, L and M To: Erin McKee and Lori Smith

Don't ever forget your senior year of soccer. Always remember us and that you're our IDOLS! We love you- your J.V. admirers. H, L, and M

P.S. (Don't forget the pixie sticks from the sleeper.)

From: Amy Manning To: The crew

What would I have done without you? High school wouldn't have been the same if all of you weren't there for me! Always remember: Someday, My Girl, Afterschool Special, Junior year F-Block English, falling in bathtubs and WBWC - H.I. forever! Thanks for everything! I will miss you. Always smile!

FROM THE EDITORS

One hundred seventy-five pages mailed off to Topeka and only one left to describe what this year has meant. Back in September, when word that we were the Aegis editors first began to circulate, there were questions everywhere we went. "Will there be color?" (Yes, but only a little. The book already costs $19,000.) "Will there be spring sports this time?" (Yes, but to do so we'll have to shoot pictures within the first week of practice.) "How come there are so many pictures of the same people every year?" (Good question. We'll try to include everyone but some people are just more involved than others.) "Will it be better than last year's book?" (Unfair question. Every year the students do their best, that's our aim as well.) In fact the questions never stopped. Neither did the pressure.

Fortunately for the two of us we were able to work with a good staff all year. Many of them will downplay their contributions to this yearbook, since sports practices and after-school jobs kept them from attending every day of the week. That's OK, the dirty little secret of every editor is that you really only need six or seven people to do the layouts; everyone else is a role player. We had some great ones. They scoured the town for patrons and ads, developed film and typed copy till their fingers went numb. Many thanks.

Finally, the other night we sat typing out all of your names for the last time. We were up in the writing lab finishing the index while most of you were downstairs at the basketball game. It was a fun night for us (the last time we could get free food out of Marty for one thing), but a little sad and a little strange too. For when we were done, and the lights put out, the two of us were able to come down and really feel like one of you for the first time since September. It's good to be back on the move. Enjoy the book.

Students give from the heart

By BETSY CALVERT

EAST LONGMEADOW — The high school class of 1993 was the best at raising money, and the best at giving it away.

A total of 137 graduated last month, with 18 national honor society members. And they will be remembered.

The senior class's traditional ziti dinner, the 11th annual, netted $560, which was the most raised ever.

While the money went to the class initially, by the end of the year, the class gave back $1,200 to the town from its treasury —also the most ever given.

That money went to the Athletics and Activities Booster Club, which has paid half of each student's sports and activities fees since budget cuts began three years ago.

For the first time, the senior class decided to have a semiformal dance at midyear. They donated the profits, $150, to an abuse and rape crisis hot line.

Every high school class has its cliques and, usually, they never mix.

The class of 1993, however, was an exception, teachers and administrators said.

At their graduation ceremony, many students said that by the end of their four years, what they most wanted was to know as many fellow classmates as possible before moving on to a new life.

No cliques for this class

"In the beginning, everyone had their own little group, but by senior year, everyone had come together," said recent graduate Lisa Meccia.

Principal Richard Freccero and class adviser Ralph Cooley said it was one of the most social classes they had known and, ultimately, among the most responsible.

"They were a social crew, but still interested in donating money to the battered women's shelter," which supports the hot line, Cooley said.

Meccia said the night of the annual senior banquet was the most fun she had in high school.

"Everyone talked to everyone else. It wasn't a popularity type deal," she said.

Meccia said she will most miss "my friends, the teachers, getting that one-on-one extra help."

Attending Salem State College in the fall, Meccia said she will be separated from her friends, many of whom are going to the University of Massachusetts.
